

It would not be in the public's best interest for this Act to be changed in any way. If people begin to receive calls again most will give up their land lines and use only cell phones which will hurt business for the phone companies and might cost people their jobs. People have their right to privacy and not to be harassed by telemarketers.